

How (and Why) To Be a Free-Market Radical Leftist

a lecture by

Roderick Long

In its continuing effort to provide practical guidance on confronting contemporary political reality, the Philosophy Department is pleased to present a lecture by Auburn University Philosophy Professor Roderick Long. Professor Long's lecture will challenge the traditional division between left and right to offer a unique perspective on solutions to contemporary political and economic problems.

To learn more about Professor Long and his perspective on politics, visit his official profile at Auburn University: <http://www.cla.auburn.edu/philosophy/people/professorial-faculty/roderick-long/>. Or visit his much more interesting personal webpage: <http://praxeology.net>.

Monday, March 4

Science Center 136

7:30 pm

This lecture is funded by a grant from the Charles G. Koch Foundation.